

Fellowship
Ambassadors:

His Honour
Judge Jarro

Magistrate
Louise Taylor

Tony McAvoy SC

Professor
Megan Davis

Lawrence Moser

APPLY NOW FOR KWM'S FIRST NATIONS FELLOWSHIP

Supporting aspiring First Nations legal practitioners through your first year of law.

First Nations Fellowship aims to contribute towards increased participation of First Nations people within the legal profession.

First Nations Fellowship fellows get:

- $2,000 to support your law studies
- Access to unique virtual networking and career insights events, connecting you with Fellowship Ambassadors and a diverse range of esteemed Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander legal professionals from across the legal sector
- Culturally aware mentoring, career guidance and study tips from KWM lawyers and program partners
- Shadowing experiences in legal offices with your mentors
- A dedicated online portal, connecting you with the national cohort of fellows from around Australia, all of whom are going through their first year of law
- To access industry leading learning & development content online in your own time
- To become part of the KWM Community Impact Alumni network, into which KWM continuously feeds further networking, development and career-focussed opportunities arising within our ecosystem.

PROGRAM RUNS:
May to November 2023

QUESTIONS?
emma.taylor@au.kwm.com

FOR MORE INFORMATION:
communityimpact.com.kwm

“I strongly encourage Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander students in their first year of law to apply for this excellent opportunity”

— HIS HONOUR JUDGE JARRO

Ben Ward's logo (top right) represents two laws - both Indigenous law and non-Indigenous law. The central motif represents leaders from both groups coming together “to ensure law is carried out”. Law is practised by both Tribal leaders or Government bodies, and the “two systems are coming together so that we can work together.”

First Nations
Fellowship

© Ben Ward/Copyright Agency, 2021.